Backstage

The Grannies' Show, or the first digital sitcom made in Italy, is the title of an ambitious and innovative project, the fruit of unquiet creative mind of Lorenzo Garbuglia in collaboration with Claudio Tolomei, two enterprising digital graphic's artists who are proud of cooperation with diverse parties of 3D animation industry in Italy and abroad.

THE PROJECT was conceived for all the ages, for distribution by all audio-video formats compatible with Ipod, Iphone and definitely for TV and Web TV.

The episodes were planned like 3-minute short series and must be accompanied by 30-seconds mini sketches made in style of Cabaret where the grandfathers and grandmothers of an almshouse act as comics. The episodes narrate the adventures and everyday routine of one group of light-headed and full of life grannies, the guests of Villa Marilla, who came from different parts of Italy, each of them with its own character, imperfections and strong points. They are led by two super grannies, Mario Mazzaretti, a stout and light-hearted ex-farmworker from Le Marche and Gino Givetta, a lean and quarrelsome granny from Tuscany, ex functionary of communal service's office.

ORGANIZATION - Here are artistic and professional figures who move the project in the backstage: "Here we talk about an independent production, actually in the phase of preparation, which unites humour, creativity, and pretends to definite a new mode of dealing with production process and distribution of an entire project of digital animation."

"The Grannies Show is a project where a new approach to management of a such serious production like 3D animation series with minimal costs, high quality, and corollary increased margins and benefits is taking shape around."

Barabucha 3D Animation Studio is a brand name created by Lorenzo Garbuglia and Claudio Tolomei for implementation of the project. The Studio is open for a dialogue with new partners and investors who are interested to get more precise details about organization and managing of the product, which is considered mature and competitive to take up a challenge of a such global market.
